Re: Pont Fawr, Llanrwst

Dear Geraint,

I am writing with regards to concerns that have been raised with me about Pont Fawr, Llanrwst.

This historic bridge, designed by Indigo Jones, provides one of the main routes for pedestrians and vehicles across the Conwy River. More so, along with Tu Hwnt I'r Bont, the crossing has become one of Wales' most iconic images – displayed in travel agents as far away as the South Island, New Zealand!

Given the above, it is with significant concern that I have seen damage caused to the bridge over recent years. Whilst I welcome the fact that it has been repaired on every occasion, other concerns have been raised with me about the bridge also. For example, I understand that:

1. there are regular stalemates at the apex – with vehicles refusing to reverse
2. reversing into the A470 can be very hazardous
3. reversing in any direction poses a risk to pedestrians using the bridge
4. the light on the Trefriw side does not achieve its assumed aim (ensuring a controlled traffic flow), and causes confusion – resulting in drivers still having to reverse despite the traffic system being in place.

Finally, with many destinations becoming increasingly popular on the west side of the Conwy, it is reasonable to believe that there has been a significant increase in traffic using Pont Fawr. Given that this pattern is likely to continue, I do believe that the above issues need addressing before the situation becomes any worse. It follows that I would be very grateful if you could kindly undertake a full investigation into whether the current traffic control system for the bridge is adequate, and clarify whether if alternative – more effective – system could be introduced.

Yours sincerely
